SOME OF YESTERDAY'S DISCOURSES.

Rev. Dr. Paxton's Eloquent Sermon on Life-Rev. Dr. Lanahan on Immortality-Archbishop Gibbons at St. Patrick's Church-Dr. Rea Against Papacy.

The usual discussions of the "Thought Exchange" at Talmadge Hall, was somewhat enlivened yesterday afternoon by the appearance of a number of representatives of the church militant, who put in an appearance to discuss with the stalwart unbelievers who mostly frequent these gatherings, the question "What shall I do to be saved." The debate was opened by a gentleman whose personal appearance was decidedly clerical, and who spoke at considerable length, contrasting the achievements of Christians and Infidels.

Dr. Slade, the noted spiritualist, was then called to the rostrum, and after stating the question said that in his opinion it could best be accomplished by working more and praying less, or at least in allowing good works to predominate to a great extent over merely sanctimonious expressions. In alluding to an attack by the first speaker upon the principles laid down by Colonel R. G. Ingersoll, he said that that gentleman was condemned because he taught the greatest and highest code that should govern human life: "Do the best you can to and for your fellow men: show them sympathy and justice, and teach them that God is a God of love and not of vengeance and wrath." He acknowledged the existence of a power higher than man—a spiritual power, called by higher than man-a spiritual power, called by many names, that was ever striving to lift us to a higher sphere; but no matter by what code of ethics a man might square his life, unless he fol-lowed the example of the "lowly Nazarene" and dared to do right toward his fellow man at all times, mere professions would never save him.
"When we do this," said he, "we hear the angel footsteps about us, and realize that they are striv-ing to open to us the doors that bar us out from a gher knowledge and a higher life." The next speaker (who was also addressed as "Doctor") took up the question from the stand-point of philosophy, and with cold, logical que-ries and deductions made the exordium of the first speaker his chief point of attack. He was followed by a gentleman who possessed all the air of Lily Devereux Blake, Mary A. Stuart, Phebe W. Couzens, Edward M. Davis, Robert Purvis, Frederick Douglass, Clemence S. Lozier, Rachel G. Foster, Thomas A. Bland, M. D., Emily Thornton Charles, Charlotte J. Godbe, Martha McClellan Brown, M. Cora Bland, Marilla M. Ricker, Jane H. Spofford, fullibility of a god, and claimed that the non-existence of truth in nature and in the heart of man was proof positive that it existed in a personal God whose teachings and commands pointed out to every man the way of salvation.

After a number of others had expressed them-elves on both sides, a quiet-looking man in a poceman's uniform arose and took up the gospel de in a series of illustrations drawn from his prefessional experiences. At the conclusion of his re-marks a question was sprung on him from the skeptic side as to whether he found the majority of lawbreakers to be Christians or atheists. The interrogatory was evidently regarded as a poser, but after a moment's pause he somewhat demoral-ized his questioner by retorting that he found the majority of those who fell into the hands of the law were those who disregarded the teachings of

Taken altogether, it may be said that the discussion was decidedly more interesting, and certainly more evenly divided, than at any previous occasion in the meetings of this peculiar institution.

Dr. Paxton's Discourse on Life. Rev. Dr. Paxton preached last night to a congregation that filled every seat of the immense auditorium of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. His text was from the General Epistle of James, iv:14. What is life? asked the preacher. On its brief stage man plays many and various parts. Fashions change, and we change with them, but managers to constitute a board to conduct the affairs of the company is required to be held at the above meeting.

Our identity never changes. What, then, is life? Your life is your own. It is that which you can By the sixth article of the by-laws of the company not share with another, a figurent of the universe entrusted to you. Nothing of force is ever lost.
God has no atoms out of order—all space is occupied, that some good may come out of it. Let us consider, then, the significance, the mission, the goal of life. Life varies in quality as the stars. In no two men is it alike. Some men are all life, others are scarcely alive. If you touch but the others are scarcely alive. If you touch but the hem of some men's garments good comes of it, while you may—live twenty years with others and never feel the quickening of a passing emotion through them. Life varies in volume and quantity. The man that has the most head, heart, will, courage, faith, here is better than others less regally endowed. Life is short and never sure. Though short, it is long enough to build up a new earth and a new heaven. Though build up a new earth and a new heaven. Though uncertain, it is a flash of life grander than the blaze of the central suns. It was short and not sure with Homer and Moses; but those dead yet sceptred monarchs still rule our spirits from their unknown graves. We live in deeds, not years. Every true man is immortal until his work is done.

Every true man is immortal until his work is done. Time is not to be measured by years. The intense heart throws centuries into hours. Life is long enough to do God's work in. Now, the vital question is, What are you going to do with it? Life is a composite aggregation of complex forces. It is composed of varied elements. It has a body, a mind, a soul or spirit. It is compound, as is most things in nature. Now whose life is the most harmonious, the truest Doubtless he who does not starve his body to feed his mind, who does not dwarf his spirit to develop his body, who does not degrade his mind for the sake of body or spirit. He who cultivates only one side of his nature is a monstrosity. Thus St. Simeon Stylites and St. Francis d'Assisi were moral monstrosities. Voltaire, for example, was an intellectual monster. Let us draw the veil over those monstrosities who cultivate the sensual at the expense of the mental and the spiritual. God forbid that any one of us should live only to cultivate one side of his life. Man should cultivate all his powers, all sides of his nature equally. Life is an eternity begun for us. It reaches up to heaven or slopes gradually downward to heli. Life has its apernatural or mysterious side, with one foot in the nite and one in the infinite; that is the reason on are unhappy. Hence life does not not satisfy ou here. This life is not enough for you. By in-tinet, intuition, desire and hope, as well as by the revelation of God, you know you are immortal. arrangements for God never disappoints an instinct. We are an while in this city. ity begun. You cannot perish; only the beast We defy heil to destroy our immortality. Let us therefore live for eternity as well as for time. Let us form our lives after Jesus Christ, washes away sin and prepares you for better and Dr. Lauahan on Immortality of the Soul. Rev. John Lanahan, of the Foundry Church, preached to a large congregation yesterday mornchapter of Genesis, "God formed man out of dust in his own image and pronounced the work perfeet." It was acknowledged, sald Dr. Lanahan, thatthe union of the soul and body was a mystery which man could talk about but not fathom. And a principle belonging to this mystery was that the soul regulated the body, which was a mere physical machine. The body, in the course of time, would return to its original element, but the soul, after the dissolution, flew away from the physical structure to another state of being. The passage of Scripture which he had quoted tended to establish the immortality of the soul as God intended, and a belief in this mystery by man would eventually make the darkest day light. Every act of God demonstrated the perfection of his ideas, from the smallest insect to the hugest animal. Investigation invariably showed this and combined to prove that pathing this, and combined to prove that nothing was in vain or out of place. Man was made for a destiny, and filled a place on earth for a short time to prepare him for the eternity of which time was only the vestibule. He had been made a little lower than the angels, and given control of every-thing on earth, but was taught to anticipate the day when he should no longer see, as through a glass, darkly. He was not made to be punished, but to live forever. His desire to be enlightened as to the future was evinced by his visiting fortune tellers and spiritualists, through whom he en-vesterday afternoon at Masonic Temple, his subject being "The Bible in the Public Schools, or Rome the Enemy of Scripture." The lecture maintained that the pricess and hierarchy of the Church of Rome, were decided enemies of the word of God and opposed to its free circulation in the world, for they held that by keeping men in ignorance of the Scriptures they could more easily hold them in Scriptures they could more easily hold them in spiritual thraldom. Before the Reformation she kept them locked up in a dead language and severe laws were enacted against reading them. In discussing the subject of the lecture he said the conflict in America on the school question was a vital one, and the sconer the people realize this fact the better it would be for them. It was not so much the Romanist against the Protestant or the priesthood against the Bible, as it was Rome against the State, which the people of this Nation must settle.

Dr. Rea resumed his lectures against the Panacy

The Gladiator" To-Night-Pat Rooney at Ford's-Other Attractions. Mr. John McCullough commences the second and last week of his engagement at the National Theatrethis evening, and will appear in the character of Spartacus in Dr. Bird's drama of "The Gladiator." This engagement of Mr. McCullough has been one of the most remarkably successful ever played in Washington by any actor. The character and size of his audiences have been of the best, and when it is remembered that the weather last week was remembered that the weather last week was of the most abominable character—snow, sleet, and slush alternating so as to make pedestrianism almost impossible—the fact that the National Theatre was filled every night with a most intelligent audience, many nights the placard, "standing room only," being put up before the performance commenced, the conclusion that the actor who can command such attention can draw such crowds, is possessed of the highest abilities is irresistible. It only need be said that Spartacus is a character which Mr. McCullough has made peculiarly his own, of which he is the sole proprietor, and in which he is seen at his best.

Ford's-The Pat Rooney Combination. The stride from Shakspeare, Sheridan Knowles, and Sardou, whose plays were presented at the Opera-House, to a variety combination is a decidedly long one; but as variety is the spice of life, and all classes and tastes must be catered to, the management of course must be the judge of what is demanded. The company known as the "Harry Miner and Pat Rooney's Combinations" embraces the names of the most successful people in their several specialties, and the success which has thus far attended the organization will probably be added to here. Among those who are members of this powerful troupe beside Pat Rooney, who is a host in himself, may be mentioned. A Boston Excursion Party. The Raymond excursion party, which for the past two years have annually visited the Capital, arrived here from Boston Saturday afternoon and evening, and are quartered at Willard's, the Arlingon, and the Ebbitt. These excursion them, congratulating him upon the expedition of the work, and wishing him health and happiness in the future. His Honor returned the compliment and attributed much of the success of the court to to be decidedly popular with our "down-East" neighbors, and this year they have over a hundred names on their list. On the occasion of their last visit they were delighted with the semi-tropical characteristics. acter of Washington's climate in midwinter; but yesterday a number of them came to the conclu-sion that a little Boston weather had, by some means, strayed down into the latitude of the Capital.
